Animation Project. Voice of Teens

GrantiX

Voice of Teens. When you feel like alien.

Teenagers often feel like aliens in the adult world — especially after migration. A new language, culture, school, and social circle can bring fear and self-doubt. But even in an unfamiliar place, it's possible to find your people.

During the Digital Art Bootcamp, Andrey Papiashvili, a teen from Georgia, met Samuel Muñoz, a young migrant from Colombia. They discovered a shared passion for drawing and animation — and turned it into a creative connection.

Long Term Impact

GrantiX

The Digital Art Bootcamp creates lasting social and economic value by helping migrant teenagers build confidence, practical skills, and a sense of belonging. Through creative teamwork and public presentation, participants gain tools that support smoother integration, better educational choices, and future employability in the creative and digital economy.

Social impact

- Stronger self-esteem and emotional resilience
- Faster social integration and peer connections
- Improved communication and collaboration skills
- Reduced risk of isolation and disengagement

Economic impact

- Early exposure to digital and creative professions
- Development of transferable future-ready skills
- Higher motivation for education and career planning
- Better long-term employability and adaptability
